1	Clarity and conciseness: Express information clearly, concisely and in as few words as possible without repeating the same concept and information using different words or under different sections of the corporate report.
2	Concrete and specific: The information disclosed should be specific to the organization and should not be generic.
3	Good, bad and ugly: Present both negative and positive information in a balanced way and with equal prominence.
4	Effective use of presentation tools: Maximum, effective and creative use of photographs, diagrams, graphs, charts, smart arts, icons, tables and infographics in the sections where normally narrative disclosures are given. This also include the theme on the cover page.
5	Sequence, structure, logic and flow: Follow a logical structure to enhance connectivity of information through sections and chapters and include internal cross-references and linkages as appropriate to limit repetition.
6	Easy to understand: Use of simple plain language and avoid using jargons or technical terms.
7	Consistency & comparability: Where disclosures differ or have been rearranged, have been properly presented with cross reference.
8	Relevance: Effectiveness of photos and graphs including the theme on the cover page.
